

Jackie Denyer is a Clinical Nurse Specialist for children with epidermolysis bullosa, based at Great Ormond Street Hospital, London. This post is part funded by the charity DebRA UK.

Jackie has over 20 years experience in working with children affected by all types of EB.

The aims of the service are to offer specialist care to families and health professionals with a particular emphasis on skin and wound care, feeding techniques, pain relief, genetic counselling and co-ordination of pre-natal diagnosis. This is both a challenging and rewarding post, skills vary from taking diagnostic skin biopsies to education of carers including parents, medical professionals and teachers.
