

Sally Bell-Syer is the Managing Editor of the Cochrane Wounds Group. The Cochrane Wounds Group is part of The Cochrane Collaboration, an international non-profit and independent research publishing organisation that aims to help people make well-informed decisions about healthcare. Sally has a degree in Psychology and a Masters degree in Health Sciences Research and is an experienced systematic reviewer. In her role she manages the editorial process for the publication of reviews of the effects of interventions for the prevention and treatment of wounds and wound complications. Currently the Group has over 100 reviews published on the Cochrane Library with a further 60 in preparation.

